

Git and GitHub

Link to learn more: <https://missing.csail.mit.edu/2020/version-control/Links to an external site.>

Addendum: The stash works just like a regular Stack data structure. So every time we call `git stash`, it takes the contents of the current working directory and pushes it to a storage location that works like a stack, and resets the working tree to the last commit. And `git stash pop` will pop off the top of the stack and put its contents in our working directory.

